« THERE IS NO TOMORROW, WITHOUT YESTERDAY »

TRUTH COMMISSIONS, BEYOND DEALING WITH THE PAST: CAN THEY PLAY A PREVENTIVE ROLE FOR TORTURE?

Case study of the Chilean Truth Commissions

Author: Nathalie Munoz Tord
Supervisor: Prof. Benedek Wolfgang
TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

---

1. THEORETICAL APPROACH TO TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE

1.1. THE CONCEPT OF TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE ........................................... 10
1.2. TRUTH COMMISSIONS, A TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE’S TOOL .................... 14
1.3. THE LEGAL MANDATE OF A TRUTH COMMISSION: OBJECTIVES, FUNCTIONS, AND COMPETENCE .......................................................... 18

CHAPTER CONCLUSIONS ............................................................................. 21

2. TORTURE IN THE LIGHT OF TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE

2.1. TORTURE: A GLOBAL CONTEXT .......................................................... 22
2.2. TORTURE PREVENTION ........................................................................ 25
2.3. ADDRESSING TORTURE DURING TRANSITION ..................................... 30

CHAPTER CONCLUSIONS ............................................................................. 35

3. TRUTH COMMISSIONS: A STEP TOWARDS PREVENTION?

3.1. THE NOTION OF “NEVER AGAIN” ......................................................... 36
3.2. OBLIGATION TO REDRESS: REPARATIONS AND GUARANTEES OF NON REPETITION ............................................................................. 42
3.3. TRUTH AND JUSTICE: PREROGATIVES TO PREVENTION? ......... 45

CHAPTER CONCLUSIONS ............................................................................. 49

4. CASE STUDY: CHILE

4.1. NATIONAL COMMISSION ON TRUTH AND RECONCILIATION, 1990-1991 50
4.2. THE VALECH COMMISSION: AN END TO SILENCE ....................... 54
4.2.1. COMMISSION ON POLITICAL IMPRISONMENT AND TORTURE, 2003-2005 .... 54
4.2.2. RECOMMENDATIONS AND CONSEQUENCES OF THE COMMISSION .......... 58
4.3. CHILE AND ITS PREVENTION SYSTEM POST TRANSITION ............ 63
4.3.1. CHILEAN NATIONAL SITUATION ON TORTURE AND PREVENTION ........ 63
4.3.2. CHILE AND INTERNATIONAL NORMS ............................................ 65

CHAPTER CONCLUSIONS ............................................................................. 67

GENERAL CONCLUSIONS

---

BIBLIOGRAPHY

---

---
ABSTRACT

This thesis examines the linkage between torture prevention and transitional justice, more exactly, truth commissions. Even though torture is commonly prohibited by international law, its practice is still an issue states face. This thesis will argue the need to address the issue imminently after the end of the conflict or authoritarian regime. This key period, which is considered a transition to democracy, is crucial to the future practice of violations, especially torture. Truth commissions are tools of transitional justice that aim to reconcile society, and provide the means to access truth, justice and reparations to victims of human rights abuses. This research will also consider the relation between truth, justice and prevention. Much more remains to be done to challenge the impunity of states and individuals responsible for torture. The role that truth commissions play in addressing the practice of torture and its prevention in the aftermath of a conflict will thus be discussed throughout this work.

This thesis will provide a two-folded analysis:

1. A theoretical analysis of the linkage between prevention, and key concepts and mechanisms of transitional justice and truth commissions.
2. A focused case study of Chile and its truth commissions.
2015

«There is no tomorrow, without yesterday» : Truth Commissions, beyond dealing with the past: can they play a preventive for torture? Case study of the Chilean Truth Commissions

Muñoz Tord, Nathalie

https://doi.org/20.500.11825/316
Downloaded from Open Knowledge Repository, Global Campus’ institutional repository